HUNDREDS of young people flocked to the launch of this year's Discover Young Hackney (DYH) festival.

Established performers at the Hackney Empire were joined by gifted hopefuls who took part in an X Factor style talent contest to open the annual festival. Singer Rhiann Cunningham, 14, (above) was the happy winner.

DYH 10 continues throughout February, offering a wide range of arts and cultural activities for young people in

CRIME 10-YEAR LOW

By
Jennifer Riley

CRIME in Hackney is at its lowest level for at least ten years, according to the latest figures.

The Metropolitan Police statistics for 2009 show total offences in Hackney are at their lowest since 1999, with over 1,000 fewer victims of crime last year than in 2008.

And nearly 10,000 fewer victims than ten years ago.

Hackney Police Borough Commander, Chief Superintendent Steve

Bending, said: "Crime continues to fall, which is great news for Hackney.

"In particular, reductions in homicide, serious youth violence, and knife crime represent continuing success in tackling serious offences.

"A 50 per cent reduction in burglary over the last seven years is a great achievement and represents a genuine improvement in residents' quality of life.

"However, we are not complacent. We recognise there remain challenging areas, and we continue to tackle those challenges head on."

Violent offences, rape, robbery, motor vehicle crime and domestic violence all fell in 2009.

Like the rest of London, Hackney saw a rise in burglaries, but this was a smaller increase than in many areas. Compared to 2003, residential burglary in Hackney has fallen by 50 per cent. There were 1,618 offences in 2009, compared to 3,247 in 2003.

Homophobic crime fell by eight offences during 2009. There were eight murders in Hackney in 2009, and nine in 2008.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: "I welcome the latest evidence that crime is continuing to fall.

"The police and Council's joint efforts to tackle crime, drive down anti-social behaviour, and combat drug and alcohol-related problems has led to a dramatic reduction in crime over the last five years, and it is good to see this continuing.

"While statistics might seem remote from people's lives, a drop in crime figures represents fewer victims of crime.

"There are still important issues to address and we will continue to work with the police to build a safer Hackney for all residents."

Some of the issues to be tackled include sexual offences other than rape, which rose by 33 during 2009, and gun crime, which rose by 54 offences. This increase in gun crime continues to be a matter of grave concern, and is the subject of extensive operational activity by the police.

Message from the Mayor

Taking the lead on decent housing

WITH house prices on the rise again, decent, affordable housing continues to be a priority in Hackney. So it's good news that, following Council lobbying, the Government has recognised this and awarded the borough one of the highest amounts of funding in the country to build new homes.

The Old School site, Woodberry Down, where 117 new homes are currently being built Across Hackney construction work is taking place to build hundreds of new social-rented and affordable homes, as well as key community buildings such as schools, after the Council received a total of over £43million in Homes and Communities Agency (HCA) funding since last September.

In the north of the borough, progress at Woodberry Down continues with work set to begin soon on a further 187 social rented homes and 60 shared ownership homes on two sites, following the award of £27million from the HCA. Work on the first 117 homes of the £1billion regeneration programme began last March, and is due for completion in 2011.

As a result of the Council securing another £16million from the HCA, the largest allocation in London and the second largest in the country, we will see more than 200 new council homes built for rent across the borough as part of its Estate Renewal Programme – at Bridge House in Chatham Ward; on the Colville Estate in De Beauvoir; and on the sites of Alexandra National House in Brownswood; and Rendlesham House and Ottoway Court in Hackney Downs.

For almost 30 years, affordable housing across the country often only got built as a spin-off of new private developments, and the downturn in the housing market threatened to bring even that to a halt. The commercial marketplace cannot be left as the only force to drive how housing is delivered. The Council has been working with the Government and its agencies and has successfully strengthened their confidence to give Hackney their social housing investment directly, so that we can deliver homes that are much needed by local residents.

Big boost for regeneration

By James Willsher

HACKNEY has received a total of over £43million in Government funding to build more than 440 homes.

The Council has been awarded one of the highest amounts of Homes and Communities Agency (HCA) funding for social rented and shared ownership homes in the past six months.

In January, £6.26million was allocated for 87 social rented homes at Bridge House, E9, and Alexandra National House, N4, estates, as part of the Council's wider Estate Renewal Programme. Last September, nearly £10million was awarded to provide 115 homes at Bridport House, Colville Estate, N1; Ottoway Court, Landfield Estate; and Rendlesham House, E5.

Most recently Woodberry Down, N4, received £26,975,000 in HCA funding, which will build 187 social rented and 60 shared ownership homes built at the Woodberry Grove North site, and also in Green Lanes near Manor House Tube station.

Work is set to begin in March and the new homes are expected to be completed in 2012/13. Berkeley Homes is the preferred developer for the building programme and started work on Woodberry Down's first

“This £27million unlocks the next phase in Woodberry Down renewal”

117 affordable homes, which are due for completion in 2011, last March.

Genesis Housing Group has also been confirmed as the Registered Social Landlord (RSL) for Woodberry Down. Genesis will own and manage the new social-rented and affordable homes in the area once they are built.

Deputy Mayor of Hackney, Cllr Karen Alcock, said: “This £27million unlocks the next phase in Woodberry Down renewal. It is providing high-quality social-rented and affordable homes, as well as key community facilities.”

The regeneration of Woodberry Down will deliver over 4,500 new homes of mixed tenure and a range of new facilities including a community centre, health centre, business centre, new Academy, extended primary school, as well as retail and commercial opportunities.

Hackney is among the top-performing London boroughs for affordable housing provision, with 800 new homes delivered last year exceeding the Greater London Authority target of 543.

Her Royal Highness The Princess Royal meeting carers at the official opening of City & Hackney Carers' Centre's on 4 February

High praise indeed

By
Marcel Reinard

PRINCESS Anne has praised a Hackney carers' centre and its volunteers for 'raising funds and awareness that are crucial' and providing 'a valuable local service'.

During a visit on 4 February to City & Hackney Carers' Centre to officially open its new premises in Dalston, The Princess Royal commended staff, volunteers and carers.

The centre in Tyssen Street supports carers by giving advice; sourcing grants; organising care relief; and offering bereavement counselling.

The Princess heard about a programme for young adults, as well as schemes allowing young people to act as carers while developing their own lives.

Jeffrey Lewis, who had been balancing study with looking after his mother and volunteering at the centre, explained: "As a carer, it's difficult to study, work and care – there's not much time left for yourself. But the new young adult service is hoping to generate more resources and clarity for carers."

Tutsi Machanyuko, another young carer and volunteer, added: "Visits like today not only show that people like Princess Anne are speaking up for you, it also may get people in the area to see the work we do and even volunteer."

Founded in 1991, the centre now has 800 carers on its database. It has been affiliated to the Princess Royal Trust for Carers since 1995 – the only charity Anne lends her name to.

The Princess concluded: "Volunteering has been key to making centres such as this work and it's important they remain effective in the future."

Masterplans for regeneration

CENTRAL Hackney and Dalston will receive another regenerative boost after masterplans to transform both town centres were adopted by the Council last month. Following consultation with residents, community groups and businesses, the plans will guide growth and investment over the next 15 years, while protecting the distinctive character of both areas.

The Council is also now in the preliminary stages of drawing up a strategy to improve the north-west area of the borough and is inviting residents' views on plans for Manor House, which include redeveloping the area around the Tube station. Consultation events will take place on 9 February, 6-8pm, at Woodberry Down Primary School, N4; and 11 February, 6-8pm, at Stoke Newington West Reservoir Centre, N4.

Services are on the move

COUNCIL services are on the move during the next few months, as part of a modernisation programme to make it easier for residents to access the help and information they need. Council services including Housing Needs and Adults and Older People's Services will be moving into Hackney Service Centre, at 1 Hillman Street.

The new, £48million development allows residents to do all their Council business in one central location, instead of traipsing between different offices, spread across the borough.

As part of the project local charity Disability Backup was asked to help make the building more accessible for people with disabilities. Co-ordinator, Catherine Love, said: "Disability Backup has really valued its involvement on this project. We are very impressed by the building. The accessibility features are innovative and we're pleased with the measures that have been put in place." Cllr Sophie Linden, Cabinet Member for Customer Services, said: "The Council is committed to providing high quality services for residents that are readily accessible, and the new service centre is part of a wider drive to improve customer service."

Young people learn about legacy of hope

SCHOOL pupils, residents and councillors gathered for a moving ceremony to mark Holocaust Memorial Day.

Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Muttalip Ünlüer, led the Town Hall event on 27 January. He asked guests to consider the 65th anniversary of the liberation of the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp by Allied Forces during the Second World War, the Holocaust, and other genocides that have taken place since, particularly in Cambodia, Bosnia, Rwanda and Darfur.

Pupils from Simon Marks Jewish Primary School, N16, performed songs. Followed by Cllr Ian Rathbone, who introduced

“ Let us be encouraged that the young people here today take these events seriously ” this year's theme 'The Legacy of Hope', and Nicola Baboneau, from The Learning Trust, who spoke about 'Facing History and Ourselves'.

Students from the Petchey and City academies then gave a presentation on the life of Anne Frank, and Miep Gies, who helped hide the Jewish teenager's family from the Nazis.

There was also a vocal solo from a Cardinal Pole Catholic School pupil, while Skinners' Company's School for Girls students spoke about 'Reflections on Rwanda'.

The Speaker added: "Let us be encouraged that the young people here today – and their generation – take these events seriously."

"It is they we will rely on to carry the torch in future years of understanding the need to stand up to hatred – and that we all share the same humanity."

The ceremony concluded with the lighting of a memorial candle and a two-minute silence.

Guests also included Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, and Hackney North and Stoke Newington MP, Diane Abbott. The party later joined schoolchildren to lay a floral tribute at the Holocaust Memorial Plaque in the Town Hall Square.

Work in the park

By
Karyn Michael

WORK is now under way at Clissold Park and House in Stoke Newington as part of a £8.9million restoration project.

The park was first opened to the public in 1889, and the scheme is the first major redevelopment of the building and surrounding estate for more than a century.

The project is jointly funded by The Council and Heritage Lottery Fund.

Construction company Mansell started initial work on the house this month. The 19th century building is being restored to reflect its original architecture, while improving it for modern use, with a new café, better access for people with disabilities, and new function and meeting rooms for community use.

Other works planned include extensive maintenance of the New River and lakes, which run through the grounds; renovation of the animal enclosures; a new play, urban sports area and butterfly dome; plus a refurbished bowls pavilion and pump house. Work is set to continue until summer 2011.

Cllr Nargis Khan, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: “After years of careful planning, and consulting with the park user group, it is wonderful to finally see the start of what will be the transformation of one of Hackney’s best-loved parks.

“Such a large project will inevitably mean adapting to changes happening around the park throughout the project, but the work has been planned so the minimum of disruption occurs and that people can still enjoy the park.

“In 2011, Clissold Park and House will be a flagship amenity for the entire borough and visitors to benefit from.”

Park users will be kept updated via notices in the park and information on the Council website. Monthly progress reports are also available by e-mail on request.

ARCHBISHOP Desmond Tutu has backed the 2012 Games as a celebration of communities in London and throughout the world.

During a visit to the Olympic Park in East London on 4 February, the Archbishop met with site workers, plus children and residents from the five Olympic host boroughs. He said: “It is very exciting today to see how the Games are a catalyst for change in this part of London and how they will deliver a lasting social, economic and sporting legacy. “As a South African, I know how much sport can help bring different people and nations together.”

Awarded a Nobel Peace Prize in 1984 for his role in campaigning for the end of apartheid in South Africa, the Archbishop was in London to take part in the inaugural London 2012 Diversity and Inclusion speaker series.

An enthusiastic crowd enjoy The Electric Landladies (above); and tea dancers take a twirl (below) at the reopened Stoke Newington Town Hall

By
Marcel Reinard

A SERIES of events at Stoke Newington Town Hall showcased the newly reopened building as a place for the whole community to get together.

Revellers came from across London for the first dance this century at the beautifully restored Art Deco venue.

More than 250 people arrived for an afternoon tea dance in the Assembly Hall on 29 January. Many travelled from as far afield as Brent, Harlow and Romford – and of course much closer to home in Hackney.

Some relived memories from the building's heyday in the 1950s, while others were visiting for the first time.

"I remember when we used to kiss and cuddle the boys on the balcony," said pensioner Vita, adding "and having a bit too much to drink over by the stage."

Joan Huxtable, who is in her 70s, said: "It's a wonderful building, I really enjoyed myself, I'd definitely come again." Jokingly adding: "I just wish there were more men."

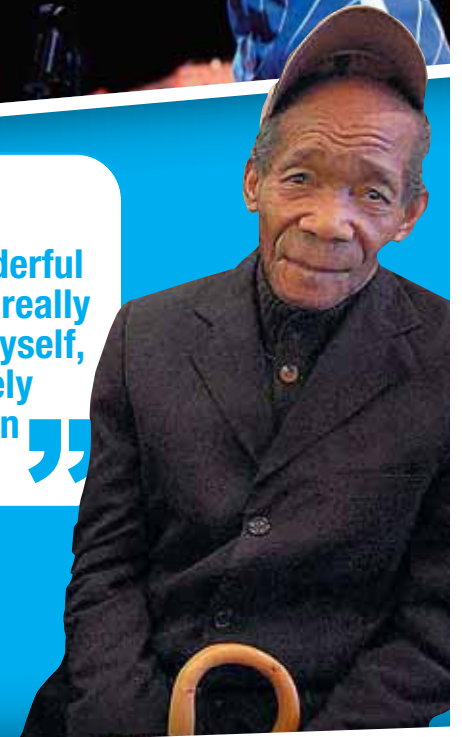

DJ Syd Cheecwright kept the jazz, rumba and swing flowing. Then, as night fell, the doors reopened for the eagerly awaited 'Blow the Fuse' party. It was clear from the queues that this was an event the community had been waiting for. An eager crowd turned out to see the Electric Landladies perform their trademark mix of 1960s and 70s rock and funk numbers. The band seemed to thoroughly enjoy being back on stage in the Town Hall – a venue where many of them had played shows in the past as members of former local supergroup The Emma Peel Fan Club.

By the second or third number, the crowd were up and dancing and grooved their way through tunes from Dusty Springfield, Lady Marmalade, Abba, Michael Jackson, Duffy, Stevie Wonder and a host of other dancefloor favourites. The Reveal showcase, from 27 to 31

January, also saw a health fair; a talk on the restoration project from architects Hawkins Brown; the launch of an empowerment project for Caribbean older people; and weekend exhibitions.

Launch pad for talent

The launch of annual youth art festival Discover Young Hackney showcased the borough's brightest up and coming talent

Pictures: Olivia Harris

A TALENTED singer stole the show at the launch of this year's Discover Young Hackney (DYH) youth arts festival.

Hundreds of young people enjoyed a night of lively entertainment at the Hackney Empire on 22 January, hosted by Choice FM presenter Kat B.

The crowd cheered on local youth competing in the 'I'm In' talent contest, as well as performances by established acts including musician Crazy Harmonica and dance group X7eaven.

Rhiann Cunningham, 14, of Cardinal Pole Catholic School, was judged the best act of the night. Her version of 'If I Ain't Got You' by Alicia Keys earned

www.hackney.gov.uk

Clockwise from above: audience members, dance troupe EscenTrick; contestant Jermaine Jackson; and a member of Nila and the Rajas her a two-month scholarship to the X7eaven Academy in Leyton to hone her performance skills.

She said: "It was my first time singing in public, but I really enjoyed it. I think I did well because I wasn't nervous. I was really pleased to have won, although it was embarrassing because I cried when the crowd sang my song back to me. I've now started at the X7eaven Academy where I'm doing street dance and vocal lessons at weekends. I hope I can go on to sing when I leave school, it would be the best dream ever."

DYH is the Council's month-long programme of free activities for 11 to 19-year-olds, aimed at making arts and culture more accessible to young people.

More talent to discover

By Ola Adeniran, 13 & Amrita Kaur-Landa, 14

WHEN we attended the DYH launch for 2010, we were hoping for it to follow on from the success of previous years. We certainly were not disappointed. We enjoyed spectacular performances by local young people, as well as more established acts. Dance group X7eaven, who came on first, were extraordinary. They showcased their gift of dancing and made hip hop routines seem effortless. Crazy Harmonica played on the conventions of music by using the harmonica in a unique and abstract way. For example, he played 'Love In This Club' by Usher, as well as a grime instrumental. This was a definite hit with the audience. The local acts that entered the talent contest brought all they could to the plate. Winner Rhiann definitely deserved her prize of a scholarship at a performing arts school. Once again the Discover Young Hackney launch highlighted the talent of the borough's youth.

Rooted in Dalston's past

By
Emma Britton

DALSTON will always hold a special place in Charlie Collins' heart. It is the area he made his home when he moved to the UK from Jamaica in the 1950s. And it is the last place he saw his son alive before he lost his life in the New Cross fire.

Walking around the town centre today in his bright red hat and colourful tie, a broad smile spreads across Charlie's face as he surveys the block of 34 new flats that will be named after him – Collins Tower.

It will include a library and public archive, and is part of development on Dalston Lane, which will create more than 500 new homes, including affordable housing – as well as shops and restaurants – all centred around the new London Overground Station and a landscaped public square.

The construction has had its share of critics, but Charlie is delighted with the way it is all coming together. And he is particularly pleased with plans for the public square, which will include a memorial to his son Steve, and the 12 other young people who lost their lives at a house party in New Cross, south-east London, in 1981.

When Charlie arrived in the UK, he started a reggae club in Dalston which attracted big names, including Bob Marley and Stevie Wonder. Influenced by his dad's role as a bandmaster in Jamaica, Charlie began producing his own records and the 73-year-old grandfather is still recording today as 'Sir Collins'.

Dalston was a different place in the 1960s – as was the rest of the country – and racial problems were heightened by the presence of the National Front's headquarters in Shoreditch.

"We had to prepare ourselves at all times for trouble," said Charlie. "We had to walk in groups or, if not, prepare to get assaulted by the authorities. We were always the offenders, but we had never done anything."

Determined to take a stand and try to improve relations between the black community and police, Charlie became an honorary member of the police consultative committee. He also ran music outreach sessions for the local community, in addition to his club nights.

"I chose a memorial of trees so the children will always grow"

And it was at his club that he heard the terrible news that made him fear his 17-year-old son had lost his life. Following in his dad's footsteps, Steve was DJ-ing at the New Cross party on 18 January, 1981. Charlie said: "I heard about the fire on the radio. I immediately got into the van I'd bought for Steve's sound system and drove to New Cross. But I couldn't get any information, so I had to drive back to the police station in Dalston. I knew some of the police officers through my voluntary work, and they tried to find out what had happened for me. They said there had been no sighting of my son, but that I had to expect the worst."

Five days later, Charlie received Steve's jewellery – and confirmation that he had died in the fire. There were fears of an arson attack, and for years the police were accused of a cover-up by ruling out a racial motive. But today, Charlie says he has heard nothing to make him think it was anything other than a terrible tragedy.

To mark the first anniversary of the fire, he planted 13 trees at the scene in New Cross. Charlie also planted another 13 trees at his music club in Dalston – one for each of the young people who lost their lives. He said: "I chose a memorial of trees so the children will always grow. To me, they were just fallen heroes."

Thirteen new trees and a time capsule will be planted in the square at Dalston as part of the new development. Charlie has worked closely with the Council, London Development Agency, Barratt Homes, and Mayor of London to ensure his original trees, which made way for the development, would be replaced. He hopes this will ensure the young people are never forgotten.

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I live in a basement flat and although I put my recycling outside, it is not being collected. I was under the impression that the Council operated a kerbside collection service.

A: In order for us to provide an effective service, residents in basement flats are asked to ensure they bring their recycling up to street level for collection. For health and safety reasons, our crews are unable to collect recycling unless it has been placed at street level, where it can be easily seen, by 7.30am on the appropriate collection day. If you need help to lift your recycling box, or carry it up basement steps, call the recycling hotline below and ask for information on assisted collections.

A fruitful project

By Olaide Oyekanmi

RESIDENTS on Wilton Estate, E8, were happy to get their hands dirty to plant seven types of fruit tree, including pear, apple and plum.

The collaboration between Wilton Estate Tenants and Residents Association (TRA), Hackney Homes, and The London Orchard Project will hopefully see the trees bear fruit for many years to come. Hackney Homes funded the project, while the London Orchard Project organised training for residents who wanted to get involved by planting and caring for the trees.

Sheila Suso-Runge, TRA Treasurer, said: "This is a wonderful sustainable, environmental project adding value to our community. Everyone got involved, even the youngsters from the Wilton youth music project."

Rowena Ganguli, from The London Orchard Project, added: "The Wilton Estate tree planting is the first of 11 orchards that we will be planting in conjunction with residents around London this winter.

"This will help people to enjoy an abundant harvest for many years to come."

Ward councillors' Vincent Stops, Samantha Lloyd and Alan Laing joined residents on 23 January to help with the tree planting.

Hackney Homes invites residents to an open day at Ocean, Mare Street, on 18 February. There will be information on money,

More estates with peel appeal

By Naomi Ocansey

RESIDENTS living in Hackney's estates and high-rise properties are benefiting from an expansion of the Council's food waste collections.

The service, which turns kitchen scraps into compost, has now been extended to cover 25 per cent of the borough's estates, up from 10 per cent.

Residents are provided with a small, seven-litre caddy, to collect food scraps in the kitchen, as well as a roll of compostable liners. People then transfer the liner full of food waste into a larger onsite container, which is emptied twice a week by recycling staff and cleaned regularly.

Monika Hazelton (left) from Lea View House Estate, E5, said: "I love the food waste scheme and have been pioneering its benefits and ease of use with neighbours, family and friends."

"I think the cycle of composting is great, as the food that is composted from the estates is reused to fertilise estate lawns and gardens."

Junk? What rubbish

THE latest Give or Take day saw more than 200 people donating bric-a-brac or eagerly snapping up someone else's unwanted items.

The event, on 21 January, at St Monica's primary school, N1, was Hackney's first for 2010. Organised by the Council, it saw around two tonnes of potential landfill being given a new lease of life.

Residents can give or take a wide range of items, including books and toys, bikes, tools, paint, clothes, furniture and small electrical items.

One resident who stopped by, said: "This is the second time I have attended this event. I only came to donate some of my

International prize for River Lea Park project

A PROJECT at the heart of the regeneration of the Lower Lea Valley has won the prestigious International Urban Landscape Silver Award – and scooped a €15,000 prize.

The Lea River Park scheme will create six new public spaces between the Olympic Park and the River Thames, linked by the Fatwalk – six kilometres of parkland with footpaths, cycleways, new bridges and towpaths.

The Lea River Park was one of five international projects shortlisted for the award. London Development Agency (LDA) Group Director, Peter Bishop, said: "Winning this prestigious award brings international recognition to our plans for East London, building a lasting Olympic legacy before the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. "This exciting park will draw on the Lower Lea Valley's industrial landscape and heritage and will be a central part of the area's regeneration."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Pupils on the steel pans and (inset) some of the food

International flavours

PUPILS, parents and teachers from Gayhurst Community School, E8, got together for an evening of international food and entertainment.

The sell-out event on 22 January saw parents whip up Ecuadorian, Nigerian, Vietnamese, Dutch, and Czech national dishes.

School chef, Simon O'Connell, cooked a Russian beef stroganoff, spicy Thai chicken and Japanese yakitori. There were performances by the school's choir, steel pan players, a local Turkish saz music group, and Brazilian martial dance Capoeira team.

Year Six pupil, Khadijat Lawal, said: "I liked the jollof rice, and the cakes. The steel pans were awesome."

Bulent Mustafa, also in Year Six, added: "The crowd was clapping and dancing when I played the drum in the saz music band. My favourite food was the lahmacun, a Turkish flatbread with toppings."

Creating their own EastEnders

A WRITER for a popular BBC soap opera has helped young performing arts students create their own East End drama. Pete Lawson, scriptwriter for 'EastEnders', worked with BTEC students at Hackney Community College to create theatrical pieces for their course.

The students managed the production, including sound, props, lighting, budget as well as scripts.

Pete said he had enjoyed overseeing a stage in the students' development as actors and writers during his two month stint with the groups: "It takes a lot to get a writer out of bed for 9am, but they're so keen to learn I can honestly say it's a joy."

The plays were performed at the college's performing arts studio from 13 to 15 January.

Turning lives around

All stories by
Marcel Reinard

A NEW centre for young people has opened in Hackney – in line with creative feedback from the project's target audience.

The Fairbridge centre in Bayford Street, E8, offers education, training and physical activity courses for 13 to 25-year-olds to help improve their confidence and motivation and turn difficult lives around.

Young people using its former site in Hackney

Grove, E8, worked with interior designers on planning, design, decoration and artwork for the new centre.

Designers involved in the project described their contributions as 'invaluable'.

Elizabeth, 23, said: "When I saw the new centre I was amazed – seeing it change from a blank canvas to the bright, useable space we'd planned was great."

A launch event on 22 January was catered by young people and television chef Paul Merret, from BBC2's 'Economy Gastronomy'. Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, officially opened the building.

The centre offers combined activities such as canoeing and caving to improve teamwork, with employability workshops. It is hoped young people using the centre will return to school, make better, more informed career decisions or enter further education.

Fairbridge is a national charity which has worked with more than 530 young people since it opened in Hackney in 2005.

The new centre will let staff work with an extra 200 young people a year, as well as increasing the activities on offer.

London's first Fairtrade primary

A STOKE Newington school has become the first in London to receive the Fairtrade seal of approval.

Students from Jubilee Primary have spent the last 18 months lobbying companies such as Tottenham Hotspur FC and Cadbury's, as well as their own caterers and uniform designers, to introduce more products that offer a fair wage to producers in the developing world. The young campaigners have also sold Fairtrade products at a weekly stall and promoted products at events in the borough.

Teacher and Fairtrade co-ordinator, Melissa Davies-Oliveck, said: "The children were thrilled to receive the status. It's been a chance to see that charitable work isn't just about donating money – it is also about using their power as consumers to help others have a better life."

The Fairtrade Foundation works towards securing better prices, working conditions and local sustainability for workers and farmers in the developing world.

Iniva at Rivington Place, EC2, 28 January-13 March

More than 15 years after its formation, Iniva is considering its past work to diversify mainstream art institutions; as well as examining where it is now, and what role it might play in the future.

Is the era of 'cultural diversity' in the arts now over?

Has the globalisation of the art world 'solved' the problem? For the latest offering at this remarkable, purpose-built art space in Shoreditch, curators, artists and filmmakers have selected a collection of paintings, sculpture, graphics and films.

Works in progress

IN total 16 artists show work in Iniva's Progress Reports, exploring interpretations of 'cultural diversity'. The most striking feature of Rivington Place is the huge window display, guaranteed to make passers-by double take. In the past it has housed a mass of sewing machines webbed with thread, and a youth response to the future of Britain in the form of a giant lorry. Currently it displays Oreet Ashery and Larissa Sanaour's giant sci-fi inspired graphics that take on the roles of superheroes in the Middle East. In the main downstairs room is a 16 square foot dance floor, accompanied by a video of the 'Battle of the Boroughs' breakdance competition for which it was used.

Upstairs a series of videos range from a digital clock running down to zero in the bottom right hand corner of a blank screen, to the captivating 'Daughter Rite', in which a woman painstakingly analyses her relationship with her mother. A lively talks and events programme invites visitors to get involved and ask questions around internationalism, cultural hierarchies, participation and politics. Highlights include an invitation from Ahery and Sansour to discuss the personal and political resonance of food (13 Feb, 4pm); and a 'pop-up court' investigating crimes against diversity in the cultural sector (27 Feb, 4pm); as well as artist talks and a film workshop for young people (18-19 Feb, 10-4pm). Sport for the brain

By Marcel Reinard

Memory Marathon: 4-14 March, Dray Walk Gallery, E1; 6 March, 1.15pm, Rio Cinema, 107 Kingsland High St, E8

I REMEMBER where I was when Michael Johnson smashed both the 200m and 400m records. I remember Steve Backley losing out to Jan Železný throughout the 1990s; Florence Griffith-Joyner demolishing her other contenders; and Colin Jackson becoming the greatest hurdler never to win Olympic gold. I was sitting three inches from the TV screen.

Fortunately the memories of others are far more enlightening, as recorded by artist Simon Pope in 'Memory Marathon'. His 80-minute film is a portrait of personal recollections during times of collective cultural and political shift – specifically the memories we associate from past Olympic and Paralympic Games.

In November last year, Simon walked 26 miles in 12 hours through the Olympic host boroughs – Hackney, Tower Hamlets, Newham, Greenwich and Waltham Forest – hearing more than 100 stories from local people relaying their memories of the Games. Each participant walked with the artist for 400m then passed the microphone on to next, pooling the diversity of east Londoners.

And while the grand memories of world record breakers were included, the smaller, intimate reminiscences of personal success or tragedy were all heard by Simon during his walk.

Memory Marathon is now set to become an installation with screening, photos and information about the journey on display at Dray Walk Gallery in the Truman Brewery next month. There are also screenings and a session with Simon at the Rio Cinema, E8.

Residents celebrate the official opening of the Bells Project in Stoke Newington

Care, night and day

By James Willsher

OLDER residents are set to benefit from a newly launched housing scheme providing 24-hour care.

More than 50 residents and staff gathered on 21 January to celebrate the official opening of the Bells Project in Stoke Newington, enjoying food and live music.

The scheme consists of 28 self-contained flats for residents, aged over 55, who wish to continue to live independently, but need support to do so.

It is managed by Family Mosaic Housing Association, in partnership with the Council, and is part of the borough's supported housing with care programme.

This scheme sees care staff based on site, so that residents with higher support needs can live in their own flats for longer.

Cllr Nargis Khan, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "Hackney Council is committed to enabling people to live independently and healthy lives.

"Our supported housing with care programme helps older residents remain as independent as possible, for as long as possible, living in a community so that they are not isolated or lonely."

Health hub gets the go-ahead

By Jennifer Riley

A NEW health hub or 'poly-clinic' has been given the green light for development.

NHS City and Hackney's plans to develop a new health centre on the site of St Leonard's Hospital in Hoxton was approved by the Council planning committee last month.

The application followed a public consultation in 2006 that proposed GP surgeries operate from fewer, more modern buildings. It also proposed that four centres be built across Hackney to offer a wider range of services at a local level.

The Grade II listed St Leonard's Hospital building is currently the headquarters for NHS City and Hackney, and is part of a conservation area.

NHS chiefs vowed to preserve the site's 'historically important buildings'.

The new hub – called the South West Primary Care Resource Centre – will offer 'one-stop' access to GPs with extended opening hours, a walk-in service, ultrasound and audiology, antenatal clinics, and dentistry.

Community health services, such as physiotherapy, foot health, family planning, sexual health, physiotherapy, and adult community rehabilitation, could also be based there.

Construction is due to start in July 2010, with the official opening scheduled for summer 2012.

Turning the pages of history

A programme (left) and invitation (below left) for the 1914 opening of Clapton Library. Do readers recognise these photos of the library in the 1950s? If so, please contact the Hackney Archives, see details below

By Libby Adams
Principal Archivist

CLAPTON Library was first opened by the civic Mayor of Hackney, Charles Winkley, on 17 January, 1914.

It signalled the completion of an 11-year scheme to build four new public libraries in the borough.

Work began in 1903, when the Metropolitan Borough of Hackney – one of three former boroughs that make up Hackney today – adopted the Public Libraries Act. This was after the boroughs of Stoke Newington and Shoreditch opened their first libraries in 1890 and 1893 respectively.

The Council's resolution to adopt the Act followed an offer by Scottish-born captain of industry and billionaire philanthropist,

Andrew Carnegie, to build one central and two branch libraries in Hackney. Central Library on Mare Street was opened on 28 May, 1908, by the Prince and Princess of Wales, later George V and Queen Mary, who signed application forms to become the first borrowers in a Hackney public library.

In 1910, Carnegie agreed to increase the funding to provide three branch libraries, instead of the two originally agreed.

A Dalston branch library opened in Woodland Street in 1912, but was destroyed by bombing during the Second World War. A second branch library in Brooksby's Walk, Homerton, opened in 1913, and is now Chat's Palace.

The Hackney and Kingsland Gazette reported the opening of the third branch library in Clapton on 19 January, 1914. Mayor Winkley, having opened the new building with a key presented to him by the architect, remarked: "I have been asked this afternoon to accept a key of the building and in accepting it, with pleasure, to open the door. I also hope that it will open the door of knowledge to those who come after me."

Nearly 100 years later, Clapton Library is a Grade II listed building, and has undergone an extensive programme of refurbishment and expansion. Following a closure of just over a year, it is set to be re-opened on 15 February, this time by the elected Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe.

Hackney Council is committed to improving services, increasing opportunities for all, and making a safer, cleaner, greener borough. Here we focus on a service that helps to make this possible:

STREET SMART

Debbie Flintoff, Projects & Policy Officer

ENVIRONMENTAL Science graduate Debbie joined the Council in 2008.

Now working in the Waste Strategy Team, she explains her role: "I contribute to the improvement of street cleanliness and public satisfaction in Hackney's local environment.

"We survey wards, collate the information and feed back to parks, Hackney Homes, recycling or whoever needs the information.

"Our aim is to identify the causes of the problems that reduce the local environmental quality and try to get these resolved.

"I also co-ordinate the Council's Street Leader scheme that has residents reporting local environmental issues that are causing concern in their areas. I really enjoy working with a range of people across the Council and the community – it's a vibrant team.

"I especially enjoy getting out and about in the borough to take part in activities with local people and businesses to clean up parts of the borough together."

By

Marcel Reinard

The Ward Improvement Programme (WIP) was established in February 2009 to improve street cleanliness and protect the local environment.

Council officers are currently surveying each of the borough's 19 wards to identify issues such as fly-tipping or graffiti, and report back to the relevant service areas that can deal with the problem.

The WIP team works in partnership with the Council's street cleaning, parks, Streetscene and enforcement teams, as well as Hackney Homes, to deal with issues in the short-term, and put measures in place to ensure improvements are maintained.

Identifying problems in an individual ward, which are replicated across the borough, also means these issues can be dealt with more quickly and effectively in other areas.

Since the programme began, 15 wards have been surveyed with almost 3,000 litter, graffiti, waste and highway issues identified.

Nearly 80 streets have been awarded an 'improved' status on re-inspection. Residents contribute to the programme by reporting litter and dumped rubbish; or by becoming a Street Leader in their area. The Council's Street Leader scheme has been running for more than 10 years. It currently has 100 members working to protect their local environment.

Members of Stoke Newington's street cleaning team

The work of the WIP was recognised in Keep Britain Tidy's Cleaner Safer Greener Network Awards 2010.

Job Profile

Ladi Ajayi

Sports & Physical Activity Development Manager, talks about the role of Football Development Officer

What are the main responsibilities?

Funding has been secured for a multi-million pound redevelopment of Hackney Marshes. Part of this involves upgrading the sports pitches and creating a building that has new changing facilities, classrooms and cafeteria. We need someone to develop enhanced facilities at the Marshes and football across Hackney.

In what ways is the role challenging?

The service has the responsibility to get the best opportunities for people in Hackney to participate and enjoy sport and physical activity in a variety of different ways. As Hackney is a very diverse borough there are many different needs to be addressed and this is mirrored within the development of football. A deep understanding and practical experience of sport development in an inner city context is required to meet the potential that this role offers.

How is the job rewarding?

This role gives the opportunity to help develop an exciting part of the sporting landscape in East London and be involved with the national sport of England. When the next international football captain or football premier league superstar is seen on TV, it could be that they started their path like so many others in Hackney.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Hoxton Apprentice

www.hoxtonapprentice.com

Cindy Tuitt, 30, from Shoreditch, came to Training for Life in September 2009, following a period of long-term unemployment. She had read about the scheme in Hackney Today, and decided to go for it.

Cindy is now in training at The Hoxton Apprentice, learning front of house skills, as well as training in the kitchen. Her new talents include cooking, plating food, and serving and greeting customers.

Cindy says that the best thing about working at The Hoxton Apprentice is that she is getting to do what she loves – cooking. Her inspirations are Jeanita Snowdon, training & employability manager at Training for Life; head chef, Leon Seraphin; and celebrity chef James Martin.

Cindy hopes to one day become a fully qualified chef, and to own her own restaurant in the Caribbean. She said: "Training for Life has opened new doors for me. I have learned to cook food from different cultures, which I love, and have met a lot of great people along the way."

The Hoxton Apprentice is a social enterprise set up to train unemployed Hackney people – both in the kitchen and front of house.

Six-month apprenticeships prepare people for the workplace and give them the chance to gain an NVQ in Hospitality. Profits are returned to Training For Life, the charity which operates the restaurant, to deliver more training for unemployed people.

If you would like to offer an apprentice a job, or become an apprentice yourself, call Jeanita Snowdon on: 020 7749 2800. For more info, visit: www.hoxtonapprentice.com

Parking plans

VIEWS are being sought on the Council's Draft Parking and Enforcement Plan (PEP) for the next five years, to ensure it reflects parking needs in the borough.

The Council wants opinions on issues including parking permits and vouchers for residents, businesses and visitors; how parking penalties are enforced; what can be done to free-up parking space; and how consultation on controlled parking zones is carried out.

Information roadshows will take place on 22 February, at Hackney

Central Library, from 1-3pm; 23 February, at Shoreditch Library, from 3-5pm; 24 February, at Stoke-Newington Library, from 3-5pm; and 25 February, at Dalston's CLR James Library, from 1-3pm. To complete the survey, visit: www.consultationfinder.com/hackney

Getting involved

VOLUNTEERING is a vital part of community life in Hackney.

The Council has been working with voluntary organisations in the borough to draft a strategy to encourage and support volunteering over the next three years.

The aim was to find out about volunteers' experiences and what they think needs to happen to get more people involved in the borough.

Now residents can have their say about the draft strategy, and whether it can be improved.

Take part by 19 March and be in with a chance of winning a £30 Marks & Spencer voucher.

To complete the survey visit: www.consultationfinder.com/hackney

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2006.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They all hold advice surgeries where you can meet your local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, they can often point you in the right direction and tell you who you need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

EGG LOVERS hate waste

Eggs are magic. We always have a dozen in the kitchen. After footie on Saturday I do a big omelette for the kids using the leftovers in the fridge. They never get bored of them as every one I make is different. Veg, potatoes, meat... whatever, it all goes in the pan, then I just pour over these eggs. Nice.
